

Disaster Update: Fiscal Year 2022

(JULY 1, 2021 — JUNE 30, 2022)

American Red Cross

Amid Near-Constant Crises, Committed Volunteers and Generous Supporters Powered Our Essential Mission

A note from our leaders, American Red Cross Disaster Services and International Services

Our 2022 fiscal year (July 1, 2021–June 30, 2022) once again saw the individuals, families and communities we serve impacted by relentless crises. In the U.S., powerful hurricanes and storms, devastating floods and raging wildfires were among more than 60,000 disasters that left residents reeling in their wake, while traumatic conflicts and other crises upended millions of lives overseas. As they responded to near-constant emergencies, compassionate American Red Cross volunteers and employees remained committed to our vital mission — delivering essential aid to people facing some of their darkest hours.

Here at home, the Red Cross provided comfort and hope to affected individuals and families in the wake of natural disasters and other devastating events, including Hurricane Ida; deadly tornadoes in Kentucky; rampaging wildfires in the West; tens of thousands of home fires; and tragic mass shootings across the country. As part of our Home Fire Campaign, we also helped educate vulnerable households on home fire safety and installed free smoke alarms that save lives. No matter the size of the disaster, the Red Cross was there — ensuring that people had safe shelter, food and water, and a shoulder to lean on as they began their recovery.

Beyond our borders, the American Red Cross contributed millions of dollars and deployed experts in support of Red Cross and Red Crescent network responses to extraordinary crises around the world — from destructive flooding across Europe and Asia to the heartbreaking armed conflict in Ukraine and more. We also continued to partner closely with Red Cross national societies overseas to support vital disaster risk-reduction efforts and public health initiatives.

None of this life-changing and lifesaving work could happen without the generous donors who continue to believe in and stand behind the American Red Cross mission to prevent and alleviate human suffering in the face of emergencies. Your meaningful contributions fund the training, resources and critical infrastructure that enabled tens of thousands of Red Crossers to be there for people in their times of greatest need — delivering relief, comfort and hope for recovery. On behalf of those we serve, thank you.

Delivering Comfort and Care Across the Country

Tens of thousands of people turned to the American Red Cross for vital aid during fiscal year 2022 in the wake of disasters — as communities around the U.S. faced another extraordinary year of extreme weather and climate-related emergencies. Among these were the devastating tornadoes in Kentucky, which affected thousands of homes and changed lives forever; Hurricane Ida, which caused widespread damage from the Gulf Coast to the Northeast; and massive wildfires in California and Oregon that scorched millions of acres and forced entire communities to flee their homes.

All told, the Red Cross responded to 354 large-scale disaster operations (each costing us $10,000+) across the country over our 2022 fiscal year, a nearly 4% increase over the previous year.

- Among them were 26 major disaster operations (each costing us $250,000+) — a new one on average every 14 days.
- More than 8,600 trained Red Cross workers deployed nearly 17,800 times (in-person and virtually) to deliver aid.

striking communities that were still struggling to recover from previous disasters — the Red Cross was there, helping to ensure people had a safe place to stay, nutritious meals to eat and a comforting shoulder to lean on.

As extreme weather and climate-related disasters become more frequent and severe, the human toll continues to increase. That's why the Red Cross also launched our Climate Crisis Initiative last year. This initiative's transformational investments in our people, systems and communities will help us build our capacity and adapt our mission delivery to address the relentless growth of extreme weather and climate-related disasters. Importantly, they will also help mitigate disaster impacts on the health, housing and hunger of those we serve — including many people who lack the resources to overcome daunting obstacles that hinder their ability to recover and rebuild their lives.

Helping People in Their Darkest Hours

Cheryl Dean — Hurricane Ida

Red Cross volunteer Bill Day delivered warm meals to Michelle Dubois and Cheryl Dean in Larose, Louisiana, in September 2021 a few weeks after Hurricane Ida's landfall. Cheryl recalled how her family evacuated to Alabama to wait out the storm, and when they returned home four days later, her community had been devastated.

"Everybody lost everything," she said. "We are just praying for the best and hope that our community can come back together as one piece. We thank the Red Cross for everything that they are doing for all our community and everyone out here."

Vivian Forgy — Hurricane Ida

"I was in shock," said Vivian Forgy, of the night floodwaters from Hurricane Ida's remnants poured into her Englewood, New Jersey, home in August 2021. "I never had anything like this happen to me before."

Returning to her apartment the next day, Vivian learned that the building was closed and residents had to vacate for at least two years for repairs. She had lost nearly everything.

Thanks to our generous donors, the Red Cross was there to provide Vivian emergency financial assistance to help with immediate needs. "Thank goodness for that assistance," said Vivian. "With that help, I was able to purchase some clothes, shoes ... I really had nothing but the clothes on my back!"

Stacie Ennis and Family—Southern and Midwest Tornadoes

Red Crosser Jennifer Capps spoke with Stacie Ennis at her family's home in Bowling Green, Kentucky, which was heavily damaged by horrific tornadoes in December 2021.

Red Cross volunteers provided the Ennis family with emergency lodging, food and other assistance. "They make sure we are well taken care of," Stacie said.

As they began to rebuild their lives, Stacie was grateful for the support of the Red Cross and its donors. "If we didn't receive assistance from the Red Cross, I don't know where we'd be," she said.

Tircio—New Mexico Wildfires

At the Red Cross shelter in Glorieta, New Mexico, Tircio told Red Cross volunteer Darlene his story. When the May 2022 wildfires threatened his home, he was forced to flee. Tircio took refuge in a camper for a week.

Now staying at the shelter, he was grateful to have a bed to sleep in, food and supplies. "You guys have been a blessing," he said, as he waited for the smoke to clear so he could go back home.

Providing Vital Aid After Home Fires and Other Emergencies

Large-scale disasters make up a fraction of our disaster responses. In addition to headline-grabbing events like hurricanes, tornadoes and wildfires, we provided support following local disasters like storms, floods, accidents and mass-casualty events in our fiscal year 2022. This included the nation's most common disaster — home fires.

Over the year, dedicated Red Cross volunteers and employees were once again there for tens of thousands of people devastated by home fires. They provided comfort and care to families reeling from these tragic events — many of them left with little more than the clothes on their backs.

By meeting survivors immediately following tragedies — sometimes while the embers of their homes were still smoldering — Red Cross volunteers provided them not only with resources to make it through the next few days, but also a sense of hope that recovery is possible.

Financial assistance is a key component of how we help people recover from the devastation of a home fire. These funds help people cover basic needs, like finding a place to stay and replacing lost clothing. In fiscal year 2022, the financial assistance we provided to families experiencing home fires grew by $2.8 million over the previous year. The need for increased investment stems from greater barriers to recovery, including a national affordable housing shortage and rising rents.

We've Made Over a Million Households Safer Through the Home Fire Campaign

As disaster responders, we see firsthand the heartbreaking devastation home fires cause for impacted individuals and families. That's why teaching people what to do when these disasters occur is a cornerstone of our Home Fire Campaign. Simple actions like providing a family with a working smoke alarm can make a life-or-death difference.

“If it hadn't been for that [smoke alarm], I'd be gone.”

home fire survivor Carlyn Floyd, Columbus, Georgia

These disasters can strike anyone at any time, but some groups, including seniors and low-income residents, are more vulnerable than others. Using data and mapping technology, we identify the neighborhoods where home fires present the greatest risk and hone our efforts on helping people in these areas. Powered by our volunteers and community partners, we once again conducted our Sound the Alarm activities across the U.S., helping prepare people for home fires by installing free smoke alarms, as well as helping families to create escape plans and educating them about home fire risks and safety tips. By the end of our 2022 fiscal year, we'd help make more than 1 million households safer and saved at least 1,356 lives through our Home Fire Campaign.

Your Generous Investments Support Critical Disaster Services

Generous donor investments in American Red Cross Disaster Relief help us provide essential services before, during and after crises big and small. We deliver urgent support in the wake of devastating events, offer ongoing recovery assistance as survivors begin to recover and rebuild their lives, and help families and communities — particularly the most vulnerable — become better prepared and more resilient against future emergencies.

Fiscal Year 2022 U.S. Disaster Relief Spending* $443.2 million

- Individual Emergency Assistance and Recovery—46.4%
- Food, Shelter and Relief Items—28.5%
- Disaster Preparedness—15.1%
- Community Recovery—5.3%
- Health and Emotional Support—4.7%

Food, Shelter and Relief Items

After a disaster, the Red Cross works with community partners to provide hot meals, snacks and water, both at shelters and from Red Cross emergency response vehicles in affected neighborhoods. We also provide relief items like comfort kits containing personal hygiene items, as well as supplies like tarps, rakes, shovels, bleach and trash bags to help people clean up disaster-caused damage to their homes and property.

Individual Emergency Assistance and Recovery

The Red Cross provides immediate financial assistance in the first few weeks after disasters strike to help people meet their most urgent needs. When resources allow, we also provide additional financial assistance to households whose homes were destroyed or suffered major damage to help them overcome obstacles standing in the way of recovery, such as home repairs, transportation, health and mental health needs, and more. Our caseworkers also help affected individuals and families make recovery plans, connect them with available resources in their communities, and provide a consistent, compassionate presence, often staying in touch with disaster survivors for months to make sure their needs are addressed.

Community Recovery

Following some disasters — such as hurricanes and wildfires — that affect entire communities, the Red Cross works with a large team of partners to help impacted residents identify and access critical recovery services. When resources allow, we may fund strategic grants to partners with specialized expertise in areas like financial counseling, health and mental health care, and home repair and reconstruction, focusing on the needs of the hardest-hit and most vulnerable and underserved communities.

Health and Emotional Support

Trained Red Cross health, mental health and spiritual care volunteers provide emotional support and basic health services, including hands-on care, health education, and assistance with replacing prescription medications and durable medical equipment or eyeglasses. They also provide comfort and aid to families who experience the disaster-caused death of a relative or other loved one and help individuals adjust to their new reality after a disaster. Expert disability integration volunteers assess our facilities, programs and services to ensure inclusion and access for the whole community. They offer support for people with access and functional needs, including those with disabilities — a community that is often disproportionately affected by disasters.

Disaster Preparedness

Before disasters strike, the Red Cross works diligently to provide knowledge and resources that make communities ready for and more resilient in the face of emergencies of all kinds. From free mobile apps that put lifesaving tools and information in people's pockets, to our Home Fire Campaign, disaster education presentations and youth preparedness programs like the Pillowcase Project, the Red Cross works year-round to help children and families become better prepared and more resilient against crises.

Delivering Hope Around the World

The American Red Cross empowers communities, delivers lifesaving disaster relief and risk reduction, and helps vaccinate children against measles and rubella worldwide.

International Disaster Response

When any of the other 192 Red Cross and Red Crescent societies requests help from the American Red Cross, we send a mix of aid that may include financial assistance, trained personnel and relief supplies.

In our fiscal year 2022, the American Red Cross has partnered with other Red Cross and Red Crescent societies to help people affected by 29 major emergencies

Fiscal Year 2022 International Disaster Relief Spending $116.4 million

- Responding to Disasters—74%

- Building Safer Communities—8%
- Eliminating Measles and Preventing Other Diseases—3%

around the world, including the Haiti earthquake; flooding across Europe, Pakistan, Nepal and Bangladesh; drought and hunger crises across Africa; the Mediterranean population movement; and the crisis in Ukraine and surrounding countries. In addition, we continued to support efforts across the global Red Cross and Red Crescent network to keep people safe from the ongoing coronavirus pandemic.

The American Red Cross provided more than $71 million in financial assistance to the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC), the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and Red Cross Red Crescent national societies in our 2022 fiscal year. We also deployed 37 disaster response specialists to help manage operations, information, cash transfer programs, IT/telecom and communications.

At the same time, we reconnected over 4,600 families separated by international crises. In the chaos caused by disasters and war, family members are often apart when they need each other most. Reconnection messages transmitted by the American Red Cross can be very brief, but the three short words “I am alive” can mean so much. In some cases, the Red Cross does more than connect loved ones through a message or call; we reunite them in person.

International Disaster Recovery and Preparedness

Recovering from a mass disaster takes a comprehensive and coordinated effort. Since Hurricane Dorian’s devastating 2019 impact in the Bahamas, for instance, the American Red Cross has supported communities on several levels. We’ve given funds to homeowners and small businesses for repairs, and, at the community level, to repair and replace infrastructure. This holistic approach has sped recovery and left the Bahamas better prepared for future disasters.

In addition to supporting disaster recovery, we help community members become more resilient against future crises. During our fiscal year 2022, we supported 25 preparedness and risk-reduction projects in 13 countries outside the U.S., specifically in the Bahamas, Bangladesh, Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Mexico, Myanmar, Nepal, the Philippines and Vietnam.

Typically, we work with communities to understand local risks, develop action plans, highlight evacuation routes and identify cost-effective early warning systems. Examples of projects undertaken include:

- Partnering with the Nepal Red Cross to train community members in search and rescue following local hazards like fires, earthquakes and floods. This included disaster simulations that identified ways to strengthen community-based preparedness.
- Working alongside the Colombian Red Cross to help communities prepare for volcanic activity near the Nevado del Ruiz volcano. The American Red Cross provided expertise, helping local agencies monitor and analyze data generated by the volcano, and we improved coordination between government agencies, disaster relief agencies and community organizations.
- Conducting an emergency drill in Tran Phu ward, a disaster-prone area in Ha Tinh city, with the Vietnam Red Cross and local stakeholders. During this simulation, officials and citizens practiced water rescues, fire rescues, first aid, basic search and rescue, and evacuations from low-lying areas to local shelters.

The American Red Cross also continued to host the Global Disaster Preparedness Center (GDPC) in partnership with the IFRC to build national and community-level preparedness. The GDPC serves as an international reference center for disaster preparedness innovation and learning that focuses on providing services in three areas — knowledge management, research and technical assistance.

THANK YOU

You Bring Our Mission to Life

Compassionate donors power the Red Cross mission to alleviate human suffering in the face of emergencies. Whether it was shelter and a hot meal for a hurricane survivor, a Red Cross caseworker offering comfort and helping a family find the resources they need to put their lives back together after a fire, or lifesaving training and preparedness skills to reduce the risk of disasters in vulnerable communities, your contributions have turned heartbreak into hope for people affected by disasters in communities here at home and around the world.
